

The thoughts are not united but the aim is a united one.
The thoughts are only the different branches of a tree but the trunk which is the aim belongs to them all. It is the truth itself seeking to be apprehended by the relative stages of its vassal energies. ^{are} All we not all struggling in order to be free? But so long as there is vanity in the seeking, the cry for truth will only make us hoarse ^{and} not sane and free.

(4)